Things to consider

- Have you thought about the tile size?
Remember, using larger formats in smaller spaces will give you an illusion of a bigger room with fewer grout lines.
- Tiling both wall and the floor?
Would you prefer a coordinating or matching style?
We offer a wide selection that can cater for both options.
- Tiling a bathroom?
Would you prefer a shower tray or tiles?
Some of our tiles are suitable for shower floors.
- Require a low maintenance tile?
Ceramic or porcelain tiles are hardwearing and easy to maintain.
- Are you considering natural stone?
If so remember that they will vary in thickness, colour and appearance. They will also need sealing.*
- Have you thought about underfloor heating?
All the tiles in this brochure that are suitable for floor use are also suitable for underfloor heating.

*Some porcelain tiles may also require sealing. Please check the specification table for further details.

Tile layouts

Setting out is one of the most important things to do prior to fixing tiles. By laying out the tiles before installing you can ensure that the intended design works within your allocated area.

Tile variation

To help indicate how uniform or varied the tiles can be we have included a shading scale in each of the specifications. With many stone effect styles, the more varied the tiles are, the more realistic they will look.

We recommend mixing tiles from several boxes to achieve the best blend of size, texture and colour. If there are any defects with the finish or colour of the tiles, these can be returned prior to installation.

*This laying pattern is not recommended for tiles over 50cm in length. Larger tiles should not overlap by more than one third in order to achieve a flat surface.
