Things to consider

Have you thought about the tile size?

The size of your tiles can have a big impact on the look and feel of your room.

- Large format tiles in smaller spaces will give you an illusion of a bigger room, creating a seamless look with fewer grout lines
- Smaller tiles work well in select areas such as cloakrooms, kitchen splashbacks or shower enclosures and can create a more design-led space
- Using a combination of sizes can also be very effective, such as using smaller tiles on the shower walls and larger tiles on the floor

Tiling a bathroom floor?

Do you want a shower tray or tiled wetroom floor?

- Wetrooms can create a seamless space with the rest of your bathroom
- Look out for our wetroom icon to see tiles that are suitable for wetroom floors

Wetroom Floor

Rectified or pressed tiles?

Rectified

Rectified tiles are precisely cut after production to ensure sharp, uniform edges. This allows for smaller grout lines to create a sleek and seamless look - ideal for contemporary homes. Although rectified tiles are cut with uniform edges and sizing, this can differ from batch to batch so always ensure the same batch is used on each project.

Pressed

Pressed tiles (non-rectified) are shaped in moulds before they're fired, without the additional edge trimming during post-production. This achieves a slightly rounded edge and potential size variation that sometimes requires wider grout lines, giving a more natural and traditional appearance.

Ceramic or porcelain tiles?

Both are hardwearing and easy to maintain.

Ceramic

- Usually used on walls but some are also suitable for floors
- Many styles available and easy to install

Porcelain

- Can be used on walls and floors
- More durable than ceramic tiles

Tiling both the walls and the floor?

Do you want to match the walls to the floor, or would you like complementing styles? We offer a wide selection of tiles that can cater for both options.

Matching wall and floor tiles will create a uniform classic look and feel

Use complementary floor and wall tiles for a more trend-led design

Have you thought about underfloor heating?

Underfloor heating is an important consideration when choosing your tiles. All the tiles in this brochure that are suitable for floor use are also suitable for underfloor heating.

Don't forget

When selecting adhesives and grout, be sure to check the suitability for your chosen tiles.

Tile Layouts

Choosing the right tile layout will have a vast impact on the overall look and feel of the room. Whether you want a uniform design that fits in with the room, or you want to create a bold statement look, there are many different tile layout options to choose from.

The most common layouts are:

Stack Bond

Create a modern, clean minimalist look that works well for all sizes of tiles.

Brick Bond

Works best for rectangular shaped smaller format tiles to create more of a classic, traditional look and feel.

*Tile length should be 600mm or under for this laying style

Herringbone

A very on-trend layout, only possible with rectangular tiles, where the length to width ratio is at least 2:1. Works well with small format tiles or wood effect planks.

Other options are:

1/2 bond 45°

1/3 bond

Stack bond 45°

Running bond

Basketweave

Tile Variation

Some tiles are designed to be uniform with no notable difference from tile to tile. Other tiles are designed with variance in mind to add shading and reflect light, or to represent natural marble or stone, where you can find large degrees of variance from tile to tile.

Low

Differences among pieces are minimal, very little variation in colour, shade and texture.

Medium

Clearly distinguishable difference in texture and/or pattern with some colour variation between tiles.

High

Significant differences in colour, texture and/or pattern mean each tile may look completely different from one another to create an overall effect.

Example of high tile variation, Wisteria - seen on page 25

Tile Finishes

Gloss

Gloss finish tiles have a shiny surface coating, creating a reflective surface, and can brighten up any space and are easy to clean.

Polished

Polished tiles have the surface polished to achieve a high, uniform lustre. A smooth and shiny reflective surface is achieved, creating an elegant look and feel.

Semi-Polished

Semi-polished tiles are a balance between polished and matt tiles, with a higher shine than matt, but a gentler finish than a traditional polished tile.

Matt

Matt finish tiles have a hard surface with a non-reflective finish. They are designed to absorb light, creating a softer contemporary look. Matt tiles are generally more slip resistant than polished tiles.

Satin

Satin finish tiles are similar in appearance to matt. With a degree of surface sheen, satin finish tiles are generally smoother and softer looking than the traditional matt finish.

Sugar

Sugar polished tiles have a unique finish with their granular sugar-like textured surface which catches the light and creates a soft shimmer and glisten. Similar to a semi-polished finish but with a more textured surface.

Look out for the below icons to identify key features of each tile.
